The Perfect Couple Flare x Heroic

To Heroic and Flare-The cutest couple.

"Why the Hell am I so nervous?" Heroic thought to himself as he approached Flare's house, wiping away a bead of sweat from his forehead. He didn't think he would actually end up in this situation, but he made a promise to Flare that he would. He reached for the doorbell hesitantly, consulting if he should just leave now. He decided to keep his commitment, and rang the doorbell. A few seconds later Flare opens the door.

"Hey Heroic, you got here early" Flare was actually surprised. Heroic was late for everything, so this was new.

"I couldn't dissappoint could I?" Heroic had no clue what she meant, it was normal for him though.

"Nope, you ready?" Flare was unsure if she was ready herself. She had to pray that this went good.

"Yep, let's go!" Heroic began walking, offering Flare his hand.

"Ooh, let's go to the park!" Flare was excited to go, she hadn't been there in forever.

"Fine, only this once" Heroic was struggling to contain his excitement, he loved the park.

"Yay! Maybe we'll see the others."

"Maybe, I doubt it."

"Don't be such a Debbie Downer."

"I'm not!" Heroic had no intentions of showing his true feelings.

"Fine" While they were talking, they didn't even notice that they had reached the park.

"We're here!" Flare started skipping over to the swings, dragging Heroic with her.

"Slow down, you're gonna yank my arm off!" Heroic already knew he was going to be sore tomorrow. Flare sat down on one of the swings, expecting Heroic to catch on. He didn't.

"Aren't you gonna push me?" Flare crossed her arms, mostly disappointed in Heroic.

"Oh, sorry" Heroic's face was flustered. He was busy reminiscing on when he used to come here with Flare.

"Whatever, let's go get some ice cream!" Flare wasn't waiting this time. She grabbed Heroic's hand dragging him towards the ice cream shop. When they got inside they got some looks from an elderly couple. After they had gotten their ice cream, the elderly couple asked if they were in a relationship. Heroic and Flare's face immediately looked like giant strawberries.

"No!"

"W-we're just friends!" The elderly couple looked skeptical, but apologized for asking. As they were walking out, they decided to eat at the bridge. When they arrived Flare started giggling.

"It's been SOO Long!" She couldn't contain her excitement.

"Geez, can you contain your excitement even a little?"

"Why should I?"

"To avoid getting... please be careful" Heroic saw Flare climbing the ledge of the bridge.

"Huh?" "WOAH-AAAAH" Flare didn't have much time to respond before slipping, falling off the ledge. Heroic didn't know what to do. His body went into a full panic. He ran over to the edge and peered over.

"Flare!?" "Are you there!?" Heroic was beginning to cry. His best friend. No his love, just fell to her death.

"What are you so worried about dummy?" Heroic whipped around, to see Flare standing there perfectly fine.

"Flare, oh my god I thought you were dead!" Flare looked at Heroic confused.

"What do you mean?" "I fell onto the bridge, not over the edge." Heroic slowly began to realize what had happened.

"Oh." Heroic was speechless. He had just felt pure loss. He thought he had lost the best thing in his life forever.

"This is for being dumb" Flare punched him in the arm.

"And this Tristan, is for caring for me." Flare swiftly planted a kiss on Heroic's cheek. He was speechless.

"Next time let's not have me fall off a bridge okay?" Flare smiled at him. Flare started walking home. Heroic smiled to himself.

"Yeah, next time." Heroic walked home nonstop thinking about "next time." All he new, is that he was gonna love it.
